

Figure 3a. Riparian Coarse Screen: Percent of streams in the Columbia River Basin with gradients between 1 and 4% running through areas classified by the Northwest Habitat Institute layer as agriculture/urban, summarized by 6th field HUCs

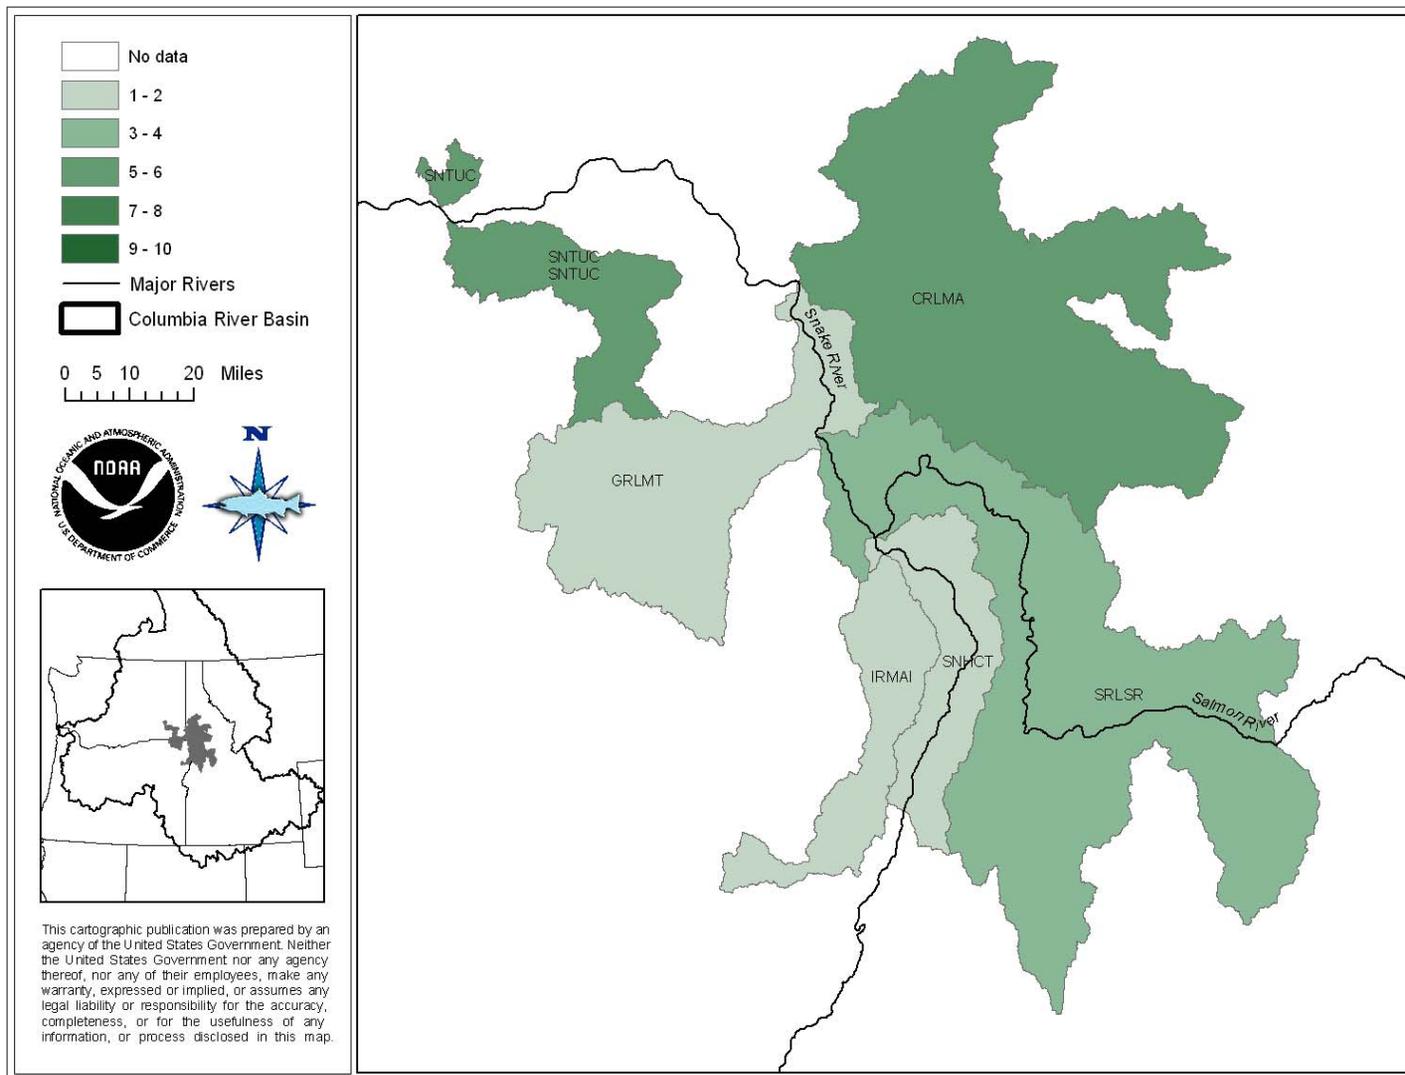

Figure 3d. Percent of riparian areas in streams where fall chinook are currently distributed that have been converted to agriculture or urban land use types, summarized by population.

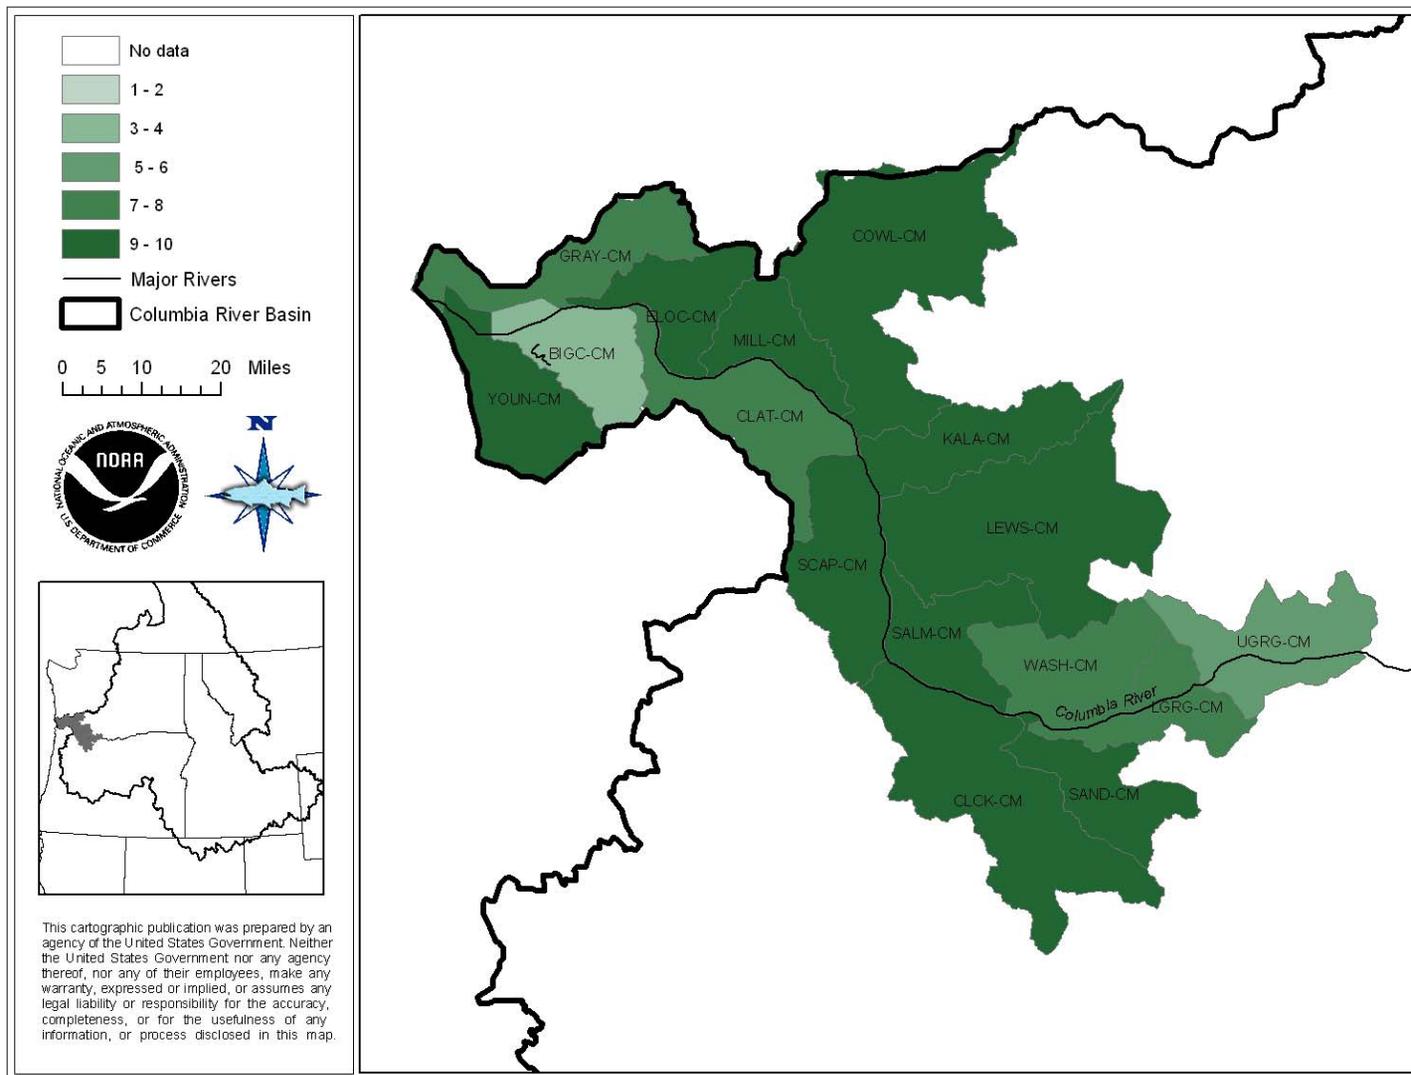

Figure 3e. Percent of riparian areas in streams where lower Columbia chum are currently distributed that have been converted to agriculture or urban land use types, summarized by population.